

Figure 1. The experimental setup. The subject is seated in front of a screen displaying a 3D scene. The scene contains a target object (a red cube) and a starting point (a green dot). The subject is instructed to move the cursor from the starting point to the target object. The screen is divided into a grid of cells, and the subject is required to move the cursor from one cell to the next in a specific sequence. The sequence is defined by the starting point, the target object, and the path of the cursor. The path is shown as a series of black dots connected by lines. The starting point is a green dot, and the target object is a red cube. The path is a series of black dots connected by lines. The path starts at the starting point, moves to the first black dot, then to the second black dot, and so on, until it reaches the target object. The path is shown in a 3D perspective view.
